Tim Walters (and the smallest player on the field) scored the golden goal for Scott Gallagher, his second goal of the match. A throw in from Tim Gabel went into the box, and Jim Dickson kept it alive with a header before Walters pounced for the winner.

Weston's Islam Rashwan had scored a lovely goal for Weston in the 79th minute, taking a Rod Hidalgo pass from just outside the area and letting go with a screamer into the back of the net, canceling a first half strike from Walters.

The win was a team effort but Walters impressed throughout the tournament with a predator's instinct for goal and a mathematician's grasp of positioning. Memo to college coaches: TAKE A LOOK AT THIS PLAYER. "You couldn't dream one up like that," Walters said of the game-winner. "I knew if it hit the ground I was getting to it. We always had the heart to come through this."
